

John Hallett

John Hallett originally came under the Henderson banner in 1988 in a senior management role. He established and developed the team of consultants and support staff in the business that came to be highly regarded in the expanding field of logistics in Australia and New Zealand. John is now a director and principal of Henderson Logistics Pty. Ltd.

Projects of all types relating to distribution with emphasis on warehousing and transport are performed in most industry sectors throughout Australia. Much work also addresses development of supply chain strategies, outsourcing options and introduction of new technology. Services have been extended to include specialised staff recruitment in the logistics and related fields.

Prior to joining Hendersons John had a strong career in senior management. He was general manager and a director of Linfox. This was throughout the 1980s when dramatic growth, market leadership and expansion of operations were being achieved. Prior to that John was general manager and a director of Aquila Steel.
